Glossário

A

Account

A customer. A Sales Rep can be responsible for hundreds of accounts throughout a region.

AIDA

Stands for Awareness, Interest, Desire and Action: the four main stages that involve the buying process.

Average dollar sale

The average amount of money each customer spends with you. The time of day, the location of a shop, knowledge or skill set can all affect an employee's average dollar sale. However, this information can help analyze the general abilities of staff.

B

B2B

Stands for business-to-business: basically, exchange of products and services between two companies instead of between a company and a customer.

B2C

Stands for business-to-customer: basically, exchange of products and services between a company and a customer.

Bad Leads

Leads that are unlikely to become paying customers -- and a sales rep's worst nightmare, because they are a waste of time. A tough challenge for most marketers is how you separate good, high-quality leads from the people who are just poking around your site.

BANT

Stands for Budget, Authority, Need and Timeline. BANT is used as criteria for lead qualification.

Bottom of the Funnel (BOFU)

A stage of the buying process leads reach when they're just about to close into new customers. They've identified a problem, have shopped around for possible solutions, and are very close to buying.

Buyer

A contact at a business. They may not always make big decisions, own the company, or dictate when they buy the product, but day-to-day sales are often closed through buyers on the shop floor.

Glossário

Buyer persona

A term used by marketers to regard fictional, generalized profiles of ideal customers. Having a buyer persona is beyond necessary (and helpful) for a company to set goals, understand how to attract and convert those potential customers. A complete buyer persona profile features approximate age, job description and pains.

C

Churn

Also known as “churn rate”. Churn is basically the percentage rate at which a customer stopped subscribing, using or paying for a certain product/service. It’s vital to know your churn rate, so you’ll be able to understand your buyer’s behavior and which features aren’t being.

CRM

This stands for customer relationship management and involves analyzing customer interaction and data to help business relationships grow. Also, CRM helps improve relationships and retain customers. There are several tools that can be used to improve CRM and make it practical.

Cold calling

The process of approaching prospective customers either by telephone or face-to-face. It’s important to know your target market, thus not waste anyone’s time. For example, if you sell alcohol, don’t cold call a shop without a liquor license.

Complex sales

Common in large B2B sales, a complex sale is one including more than one decision-maker.

Closed opportunities

An umbrella term that includes both closed-won and closed-lost opportunities, although some people use it to mean only closed-won opportunities.

Closed-won

When a sales rep closes a deal in which the buyer purchases the product or service.

Closed-lost

When a sales rep closes a deal in which the buyer does not purchase the product or service.

Closing ratio

The percentage of prospects that a sales rep successfully close-wins. This ratio is usually used to assess individual sales reps on their short-term performance, but it can also be used to evaluate profits, forecast sales, and so on. Improving a closing ratio usually requires efforts to bring better-qualified leads into the funnel.

Glossário

D

Data entry

Inputting lead or prospect data into the CRM platform.

Decision-makers

The people who make the buying decisions. Identifying the person in charge is a key factor in making a sale.

Demographic

Following on from the above point: know your market! Demographics is the study of people's lifestyle, age, buying habits, etc. Any Sales Rep will be better equipped to sell a product if they understand the product's demographic.

Discovery call

The first call a sales rep makes to a prospect, with the goal of asking them questions and qualifying them for the next step.

E

Enablement

Sales enablement is a strategic sales process enabling all customer focused employees to have the information and skill set to sell. Sales enablement involves understanding the gap between business strategies and their actual execution; from that point on, eliminating such gap. That can be done by training sales teams, exploring new platforms and, therefore, increasing revenue.

Ethics

No one trusts a Sales Rep that does not show sound business ethics. Buyers and consumers these days are well informed by the internet, so, immoral or unethical decisions will be apparent and won't attract long-term loyal customers.

F

Field Sales

Field sales reps are the guys on the ground, pounding the pavement and being the face of a company within a particular territory. Their office is generally in their car. They work mostly on a mobile device and manage multiple accounts with face-to-face interaction.

Forecasting

The process of estimating future sales to predict the long or short-term performance in a company. It will also assist with making good, informed business decisions.

Glossário

Funnel

A buying process that employees led customers through when purchasing products. The sales funnel is divided in what refers to the stages that take a customer from awareness to action.

G

Gate keeper

Someone who screens your attempts to approach the person who makes the buying decisions. Find a way through or around them. Be nice!

GPCTBA/C&I

Other criteria used in lead qualification. It stands for Goals, Plans, Challenges, Timeline, Budget, Authority — Negative Consequences & Positive Implications.

H

Head Buyer

More important and influential than a typical buyer, but can be busier, hard to contact or lock in meetings, close deals, etc.

I

Inside sales

Inside sales reps are the guys who sell from inside the company, either via phone or online. They are the ones who should be experts on cold-calling, email and other ways to reach prospects that don't involve field sales.

Intelligence

Self-explanatory for the most part but having the social intelligence to read people goes a long way in closing deals.

J

Junior sales rep

A newbie that needs some guidance. Sales is not easy. It's a hard job to fill, and turnover is extremely high. Training and supporting Sales Reps will help retain them. In the wise words of Richard Branson, "Train people well enough so they can leave, treat them well enough, so they don't want to."

Glossário

K

Key accounts

Big spenders or loyal customers prioritized by Sales Reps because losing their business would be a significant loss to the company.

L

Leads

Prospective customers to approach with your product. For example, an organic food distributor learns through word-of-mouth that a new health food store is opening soon. Boom, a lead!

Lead qualification

Process which involves finding which leads could become potential customers. That involves asking a few questions in order to figure out if such lead's problems fit with the offered solution, as well as discovering their ability to buy. A qualified lead is a prospect.

Lifetime Value (LTV)

Prediction of the profit gained with the entire future relationship with a customer.

M

Margin

The difference between the cost price and the sell price of a product. Everyone has a margin they like to work with, and for products to be appealing, they need to be able to meet this margin without out-pricing themselves in the market.

Mark-up

The amount added to the cost price of goods to cover overhead and profit.

Middle of the Funnel (MOFU)

The stage that a lead enters after identifying a problem. Now they're looking to conduct further research to find a solution to the problem. Typical middle of the funnel offers include case studies, product brochures, or anything that brings your business into the equation as a solution to the problem the lead is looking to solve.

Monthly Recurring Revenue (MRR)

The amount of revenue a subscription-based business receives per month. Includes MRR gained by new accounts (net new), MRR gained from up-sells (net positive), MRR lost from down-sells (net negative), and MRR lost from cancellations (net loss).

Glossário

N

Networking

A tremendous advantage for Sales Reps. Sales is a personality game and successfully networking with people throughout your industry plays a significant role in long-term success.

O

Objections

This can be a rejection of the price point or something more complex. Anything that stands in the way of you making that sale. For example, your company is the first to start selling wine in a can. There will be resistance to wine in a can because consumers buy bottles. Thus, you'll need to be prepared to counter-act this objection with facts or research.

Opt-in

When someone gives you permission to send series of emails, such as newsletters. Opting-in isn't necessary to send a single email, but it's extremely important to have opt-in contacts if you wish to have a solid email marketing strategy.

P

Pipeline

A document containing all your prospective customers, arranged according to the stage in which they are in your sales or purchasing process.

Product

What makes your business tick! Having a great product and knowing how and where to sell it is the key to success in sales.

Prospect

A qualified lead which has expressed interest in the product or service he's being offered.

Q

Question

Again, know your market! Know your buyer. Ask questions. Listen. Gather information. By asking what a customer wants, you're already a step closing to meeting their needs.

Quota

Sales targets to help track monthly, quarterly, or yearly success. Assigned to individual employees, regions, entire companies, etc.

Glossário

R

Rapport

Creating healthy relationships with potential or prospective customers. Listen to their needs and build trust.

Retention of customers

Keep your customers! Sounds easy, right? Growing current accounts are far easier than finding new ones. Why spend time and money expanding business with new customers, only to see them changing to competitors six months later. Meet their needs, give them time, and keep current customers happy.

S

Sales report

An important document containing sales targets, results, trends, etc. which allows you track your success. Not to be confused with rapport.

Smarketing

Integrating sales and marketing in business to enhance the skill set and knowledge of both teams. They use a systematic, integrated approach to selling, often resulting in increased revenue.

Social selling

Using social media to interact directly with prospective customers by posting good content and answering questions. Social selling involves both sales and marketing abilities.

T

Targeting

This involves researching your market and selecting companies or consumers that suit your product. Choosing the right people before they become customers helps focus your time and selling strategies.

Territory

The area for which a Sales Rep is responsible. Some Sales Reps cover a city or region, while others might look after key accounts nationally and travel from one side of the country to the other.

Glossário

U

Unique

This sells your product. Why is your product better than the competitors? Why is it faster, cheaper, more expensive, portable, etc. Your product must have a distinct selling point, feature or benefit not held by the competition.

Up selling

The process of offering a more expensive product or something extra to encourage a higher spend.

V

Variables

Are elements that can change to meet needs. For example, product price can be negotiated to meet the margin requirements of a large prospective customer.

W

Warm calling

Calling a prospect with whom you've had contact previously. They tend to turn into appointments much more easily than via cold.

Whale

A potential customer twenty-times the size of your regular ones. These McMassive customers require experienced Sales Reps, and a lot of time and planning but are worth the effort as they will be a huge gain to your business.

WIIFM

"What's In It For Me?": the essential question your prospect will ask, directly or indirectly. It's essential that, at selling, the potential customer's WIIFM is considered into argumentation.

Y

Yearly sales report

Company sales data on a yearly basis. Annually compare earnings, top line growth, and the general financial state of the business.
